Chapter 1 by Magdalene

/They took my family. They took my friends. They took my belongings. They took my love./
I had repeated that to everyone. No believed. No one understood. The experience had turned my heart to stone and turned my life to a movie. Except, this time, the enemy wins. I had hidden, hoping my family would follow behind me. Then I heard ear-splitting gunshots and I covered my ears but they were still damaged. Next time I looked out ... everything I had, owned, and loved ... ashes.

Ever since moving to this new school, people gave me weird looks and talked about me behind my back. I knew this, of course, because I had been places they hadn't ... places where freedom was given with a price. The school, the city, the new world I was transferred to after what I had had burned ... it was slavery. And these people didn't see that.

I pull my hood up in the hallways. I walk like a deer through the woods. I take what I can like a politician.

My name is Logan Roberts. I'm Citizen 70001 in the Blue Zone. One glance from my citizen number ... well, I obviously don't belong.
